ENAR Shadow Reports and Research 2023

Call for tender for a research provider to support ENAR's research activities

11 September 2023

ENAR is seeking research organisations or researchers/experts to collect and analyse data at a national level in order to respond to ENAR questionnaires. This call concerns the 27 EU Member States.

The research activities will focus on the following thematic research area:

Use of digital tools by national law enforcement agencies and Europol

Applications are expected from research providers covering one or both of the defined thematic areas in one or maximum two EU Member States. Candidates can be registered research or academic institutions, legal persons or private individuals registered as self-employed with a license to operate within the European Union.

The data provided through questionnaire responses will feed into the policy briefs and reports to be published in 2024. ENAR's research and analysis is a major contributor for advocacy and coordinated action for anti-racism, towards national governments, European and international institutions, and the media.

The reports are unique, in that they bring together the latest information and developments to help build a civil society perspective on racism. The reports reflect the views of NGOs and victims of discrimination at local, national and EU levels.

With statistical and comparative data, the reports have a demonstrable impact on influencing policy development and bringing about necessary reforms.

We are asking researchers/experts to collect and analyse reliable data and concrete cases (with dates and links to primary sources).

The questionnaire will also cover good/best practice from NGOs, governments and other stakeholders and recommendations for further actions to be taken at EU and national levels.

The researchers responding to this call are expected to:

- Carry out research in one or maximum of the 27 EU Member States in order to respond to the ENAR questionnaire.

European Network Against Racism aisbl

- Conduct interviews with key stakeholders and representatives from civil society.
- Ensure and support the evidence and quality of the findings by generating a bibliography that consists of at least 20-30 sources.
- Respond to the questionnaire on time and consult and liaise with the relevant Policy and Advocacy Advisers and ENAR Secretariat throughout the whole process.

As compensation for the duties listed above, the researchers working on the Use of digital tools by national law enforcement agencies and Europol shall receive a maximum amount of €4000 per country.

How to apply to this call?

Applications should indicate the subject heading as follows:

1. "Digital tools + your name"

Please include in your application:

- CV and letter of application, including a statement of expertise on race equality, human rights and research.
- One relevant writing sample.
- One reference.

If you are interested in this call, please send your application by email to JobApplication@enar-eu.org by midnight CET on Sunday, 1st October 2023.

If you are selected, you are expected to start to work on this project on October 24, 2023 and provide us with your duly complete questionnaire AT THE LATEST on Sunday, January 7, 2024 (midnight CET).
